When trouble arises, do you want to be prepared?

<Subheadline>

With one camera, you can see everything!

Picture it now.

You're in the back of your little market, making sure your weekly payroll is correct.

The only other employee in the store besides yourself is alone up front running the register, never expecting what is about to happen.

Two men with weapons enter your peaceful little market and "request" the funds from the till. Your employee quickly turns over the contents and leaves.

There's a problem, however. Your establishment does not have proper security equipment. You have no surveillance cameras. No visual means to verify the armed robbers' identities.

The police arrive on the scene and learn the only way they'll catch these two hooligans is by using a sketch artist, which is somewhat disappointing.

Could this have been avoided?

What would you say if I said yes?

With one simple camera.

A camera that can be installed in the center of any room and then has the ability to view everything in that room at a 360-degree angle.
